IF YOU ARE NEW TO MSIA:

Soul Transcendence

The purpose of the Movement of Spiritual Inner Awareness (MSIA) is to teach Soul Transcendence, which is becoming aware of yourself as a Soul and as one with God, not as a theory but as a living reality. Your Soul is who you truly are; it is more than your body, your thoughts, or your feelings. It is the highest aspect of yourself, where you and God are one.

MSIA provides a variety of tools and techniques that allow you to experience your Soul and enhance your awareness of God.

Equally important, MSIA presents an approach that focuses on incorporating spirituality into your everyday life. We call this "practical spirituality." It allows you to attune more deeply to your Soul and to increasingly live from that awareness.

In MSIA, we respect any approach that encourages people on their path home to God. We don't claim to have the only way, but we do have a way that is assisting thousands of people to do this while experiencing greater health, happiness, abundance, and joy.

The foundation of MSIA is loving, and it is in that spirit that we invite you to participate with us in whatever way works for you.

If you would like more information about MSIA, or to further explore its teachings, please visit our website at www.msia.org or contact us at: 800/ 899-2665 or servicedesk@msia.org

BY JOHN-ROGER, DSS

... Insight Seminars are the practical application. They are not designed to get you to heaven. They are designed to get you in touch with those levels in this world that you have not been in touch with and that you are not in control of, because you have not overcome them. And once you've done that, the spiritual exercises are designed to get you into heaven—not Insight Training. Insight Training breaks the "crystals"... It's designed to break you free from those crystallizations so you're HERE, and when you sit down to do spiritual exercises that place inside of you that kept blocking you is now gone, and you can then move rapidly into the Spirit.

How Do You GET INSIGHT?

(From a seminar by John-Roger given March 2, 1978)

Some of you have had difficulty dealing with your body, mind and emotions. We come into MSIA and many experiences take place inwardly. All of a sudden an inner thing happens and you say, “My God, what was that?” You just entered the next phase of your inner existence and no one else around you may know that has taken place. That’s fine, because who cares anyway? Actually you and I do—and mostly you, because I already have mine established. I am just working with you on your establishment.

It’s pretty obvious to some of you now that I work very closely with Insight Seminars. That’s one of my babies, just like MSIA is one of my babies. Russell Bishop pointed out a really beautiful thing. He said, “J-R, I’m realizing that what you’re dealing with isn’t grounded.” I said, “It isn’t meant to be grounded. I deal in theory and I run the assumption that these are intelligent people and they’ve been with me long enough that they can take what I’ve said theoretically and ground it themselves through a technique or an experience.”

That may be true for those who have been here for a long time, but there are others who come in the door for the first time and they may think, “Golly, what a spiritual group. They’re really way out there. I don’t know how to do that.” And so, after we get through doing a seminar which comes from a theoretical approach, we can look more closely at the dynamics underlying it. Then we’ve addressed your individuality and you say, “Wow, that’s no longer theory.” This is exactly what I’ve been doing. But at some point you may need a little bit more, and so we give you an extra “shot” of ability.

The Traveler works with Russell Bishop in doing this work—not through him, but with him. It works with everybody, but it works more closely with those who say, “I will work more closely.” It’s as though the Traveler is here and you’re there saying, “I’m going to do that.” As you move, it moves right with you, and as you move away, it also moves right with you. It’s almost like a mirror—except it can encompass you, whereas the mirror won’t necessarily do that. And it is because of that ability, and Russell’s intention and commitment (which has turned out to be 100-plus-percent) that this really works. So after we get through a seminar, we may turn the rest of the seminar over to the “Insight team.” They might say, “This is what we heard and here is the technique to work that, so let’s make this thing bust across. You’ve got the theory, you’ve heard it, the energy is present, and now here is the training process.”

Sometimes there may be training processes that are applicable, and sometimes, because of the nature of what goes on, there won’t be. But maybe the following week we’ll have worked out something, and the first part of the seminar will be turned over to that instead of to music and entertainment. But I don’t want to get rid of the music and entertainment because I really love to have people come and share their space and their talent. As good as it is and as bad as it is, it’s all been perfect in my eyes, because you were there doing it. Then all you have to do is tighten up the technique, refine it, and it becomes great. Everybody who was great started out making all the miscellaneous mistakes.

Nobody started out great, and we don’t expect them to. If they do, then we’ll know that Jesus has

I've said that even if you put on a J-R seminar and you walk away and there's nobody in the room, that room will be filled with people who have come to hear it spiritually.

It stands to reason then that we're not really interested in physical bodies. We are interested in levels of consciousness, and where that physical body happens to be is absolutely fine. If it's here, that's fine, and if it's not, that's fine. But we want the consciousness to be in God's love, because that's going to affect a lot of people.

HOW DO YOU GET INSIGHT? BY JOHN-ROGER, DSS

returned, and if he does I'm ready to give up this seat really fast. Maybe he'll lead an Insight Training. At least we'll give him the opportunity to participate, because he's given us the opportunity to participate. That's something we're looking forward to—expanding the scope of this work. This shouldn't come as a shock to anyone. I get letters that say, "J-R, the Movement has changed over the years and it's not like it used to be," and I say, "Oh, thank God, because it wasn't in God consciousness—and I think we can get it there." I'm not worried about me, but I think that as a group, we can put aside our prejudices, our doubts, and our nonsense and say, "For this time, anything is possible." The difficult we'll do immediately, and the impossible will take just a little bit longer. And what can never be done, we'll do next week.

That's what we're dealing with. We're just going to do it. We may not have all the techniques down tonight in Russell's head or mine, or the Insight staff's. But it will appear, and we're going to share that with you and work that with you. Back in 1971 I said that in 1978 the Movement would expand into a great force across the planet, and many of the things we'd be doing we don't even know about because we're not ready and we don't have the personnel trained yet. A lot of this expansion is possible because many people who are high level initiates, and who are in the inner worlds and the inner seminars, have given up their space for the new people. They say, "I'd really like to be there, J-R, because I want to sop all that up. But I'm there in the seminars on the inner now, and I'm able to know that I'm there while I'm home reading a book or watching television."

A lot of them are saying, "I didn't know that I was present during the Insight Trainings, but my husband or my wife would come home and tell me these things, and I knew them already. I'd been going through them all evening because I was there in the electronic body," or what we call the higher body. Some of us who have the ability to see are well aware that they were there, and you've heard me talk to you about the various levels of consciousness that appear in these seminars. I've said that even if you put on a J-R seminar and you walk away and there's nobody in the room, that room will be filled with people who have come to hear it spiritually.

It stands to reason then that we're not really interested in physical bodies. We are interested in levels of consciousness, and where that physical body happens to be is absolutely fine. If it's here, that's fine, and if it's not, that's fine. But we want the consciousness to be in God's love, because that's going to affect a lot of people. We're striving for that, not in terms of stressing ourselves, but we're setting that up. We're allowing God to participate more readily and openly in everything we're doing. You people who are here now, and a lot of the new people who are here for the first time physically, are not old or new to me. I've known you for a long time. You're part of this even though you may never come back into these seminars again. Everyone who leaves here and goes out and badmouths me has advertised me. And a lot of people have said, "I'm going to find out for myself because that guy can't be all that good or all that bad. He's either got to be God or the Devil." I say, "Come and find out." Then they come and find out and they say that this is the work of Spirit.

I tell people, "Believe me if you want to, but if you don't believe me when I tell you I'm the Mystical Traveler, then believe my works." Just look around at each other, for these are the very works of Spirit. You don't have to believe me at all, just look in your heart. You can say, "Well, I don't know if that's so or not...maybe he is... and I don't think he is..." Your heart will say, "You know better." All you have to do is look around at the Light and the love that comes into people's eyes and in their heart and you say, "Well, if this is the work of the devil, I can't wait to see God's because it's going to be so fantastic." Of course, I've never really known the negative forces to do good works. I've never known them to do anything except be members of the loyal opposition and train us and strain us and make us stronger, no matter what. I've never known them to give grace.

I've often said, "Thank God they're there." And people have said, "Do you mean, thank God the devil is there?" And I say, yes, if there is such a thing. Thank God because out of God came all things, including the "devil." And if God is satisfied with that, who am I to sit here and say, "Well, I think that's terrible. I think we shouldn't have a devil." How are we going to sandpaper and get rid of the junk that comes around us? How are we going to rise to that that is us?

In Insight we've said that you are worthy, and last night I said that in the flesh in this world, you're not worthy, and you've never been and never will be worthy. But the you that resides in the flesh is absolutely worthy. Even though we are not worthy in the flesh, we still present ourselves to God and approach it anyway, because in spirit we are worthy.

In an Insight training, it was said that if you've done 1000 hours of spiritual exercises, what value is that to you, just to sit and be a mechanical robot, repeating? But do one in absolute 100% intention and devotion, and it's worth your 1000 hours. Do 1000 hours in absolute perfect devotion, and you won't be here. Any time you want to leave, that's your best way out. Your body will just be evaporated right up to the next level. You'll be able to take it with you. Some of you don't want to, but I'm saying you could. Some of you say, "I want to get it in a better shape before I go," but you're waiting for somebody to come along and help you, when help is here now—that is, help in terms of Spirit.

The result appears spontaneously. Nobody has to tell you that because you know in your heart of hearts. And nobody can destroy that because it has awakened itself to you. It says, "Here, I am." All I've said to you is, "Validate your experience." Don't avoid the relationship with your heart. Your heart of hearts knows the truth.

And that applies here as well. This body is not exempt any more than your body is exempt. These emotions are not exempt. This mind is not exempt. That's why I know what you do and what you go through. If I didn't have these things, I couldn't work with you and understand, because I wouldn't have a vehicle with which to do that. But I don't let that run me. The difference is often you let it run you. Nothing is going to run me—not a cigarette, not an alcoholic drink, not sex. I may run with it as an experience, but when I get tired, it isn't going to beat me in the head. I'm not going to grab a tiger by the tail, because when you let go it will devour you. That's foolish, and yet some of you grab it thinking that when you let go, you'll be exempt and it won't turn around and bite you.

That hurts. And yet, you'll do it over and over and mislead yourself—and I don't do it to you even once. You can go back and check all the information I've given. Some of it is contradictory, and I've told you that, and then I contradicted it, because I understand the nature of the spiritual energies that come through the mind. I'm not the one doing that but I am the one describing that. And when you get there you'll say that was a good description. It did the same thing to me, but it didn't throw me because I understood the theory.

Now we're hoping that we can get into more of the practical application of the teachings. Insight Seminars are the practical application. They are not designed to get you to heaven. They are designed to get you in touch with those levels in this world that you have not been in touch with and that you are not in control of, because you have not overcome them. And once you've done that, the spiritual exercises are designed to get you into heaven—not Insight Training. Insight Training breaks the crystals. Some of you have gone through Insight Training and crystalized what it is—and you'll come back to another training and it will break up that crystal. Then you'll go to another and think, "Well, that's what it is," and it will break that up...and then you'll go to one trainer who does it one way and go to another trainer who does it another way, and that will also break up the crystals. It's designed to break you free from those crystallizations so you're here, and when you sit down to do spiritual exercises that place inside of you that kept blocking you is now gone, and you can then move rapidly into the Spirit.

The planet is changing. It's not my idea. I'd like to have it the way it was when I was eighteen, and to have the body I had at eighteen but with everything that I know now. But I had to give up something to get to what I have now. I didn't know the sacrifice had to be so severe or I might not have done it. But it's past now and there's nothing we can do about that. So we can't let who we were at 18 or 20 or 25 indict us today. What happened to you in the past is past, and yesterday should not be brought in today to complain about. The Bible says that the evil of today is enough. Don't carry it over to tomorrow. Get it done and out of the way and wake up in the morning and ask yourself, "Who are you?"

"Validate your experience." Don't avoid the relationship with your heart. Your heart of hearts knows the truth.

I tell people, "Believe me if you want to, but if you don't believe me when I tell you I'm the Mystical Traveler, then believe my works." Just look around at each other, for these are the very works of Spirit. You don't have to believe me at all, just look in your heart.

Shifting Into Neutrality: Moving Forward God's Way

by John Morton, DSS

Have you ever been in a science class where they talked about light? There are lights we see and then there are other lights, such as ultraviolet light, infra-red light and x-ray light. There are a number of light fields that we don't see through. They're not within our physical ability. Yet they are part of the realm of what's to be seen. Just as it with light, it's awesome to consider how much more there is to our consciousness than what we're consciously dealing with.

It's important not to judge our experiences or awareness as normal or abnormal but to move into neutrality. The concept of normal was derived through statistical analysis and looks at the mean or average proportion of some variable that's been tracked. What does that really mean? Not much when your experience is loving and caring toward God and God in kind toward all of the creation.

One of the things to consider is that most of our consciousness is not conscious. The part that is conscious is similar to looking at how much we actually see physically. We know there is more than we can see with our eyes. In a similar way, there is more in our consciousness than what we are aware of. It's very human not to be aware of everything in your consciousness. It's ordinary as well.

Have you ever been in a science class where they talked about light? There are lights we see and then there are other lights, such as ultraviolet light, infra-red light and x-ray light. There are a number of light fields that we don't see through. They're not within our physical ability. Yet they are part of the realm of what's to be seen. Just as it with light, it's awesome to consider how much more there is to our consciousness than what we're consciously dealing with.

The good news is that God is completely involved in every level of our consciousness. So we're already covered. It's a kind of insurance plan, a divine one. No matter what you do, you can't go outside of God's perfection. Yet part of the perfection involves your growing and learning.

You can get multiple, exponential value from your experiences. If you respond according to the highest consciousness, let's call that your spiritual soul nature or true self, then understanding, patience, beauty, love, and peace are part of what you experience. In those qualities, you're getting into the field of what is going on spiritually, and it's magnificent.

When we're in a field of judgment, we are learning about the relativity of what's going on for us. We're learning about our choices and attitudes. Judgments are negative or erroneous perceptions of the limitations in our life. Judgments come in many kinds and varieties. They can be financial, physical, health-wise, or whatever involves our desires and interests. We find out how we do in our judgments when what we want or wish for doesn't meet up with our experience. One of the common experiences when that happens is disappointment, letdown, or frustration. When you're in judgment, you might find yourself saying, "I'm upset" or "I'm angry" or "I won't try anymore."

Do you recognize any of those experiences? They're very common, ordinary and human. Rather than decide there's something wrong or abnormal, it would be better to look at yourself as a spiritual being in process in this world. You could realize, "I'm getting closer to who I am. I'm being more true to myself. I'm asking for spiritual assistance. I'm asking to progress and to grow."

You may be then taken into what you need to experience and learn, and that's right on track. You're being successful with your learning and progression. But it doesn't mean that it feels good. For example, nausea isn't something that most people would say, "I love nausea. It's such a great experience." But you can understand that nausea is temporary. You can do things to assist yourself so you don't have to experience nausea or you can move through it with greater grace and ease. Maybe you drink some water or you stop spinning around so you don't get dizzy. There are always practical applications in the experiences for our learning and growth.

Look at what do you do to stay calm and in a peaceful place rather than go into judgment, disappointment, or some kind of negativity. Part of it is simply claiming, "My intention is to be calm and clear. I hold myself to that consciousness. I breathe. I breathe naturally. I don't make myself be tense. I relax. I don't judge my process." That's shifting into neutrality.

Acceptance and Neutrality

The first law of Spirit is acceptance and that means neutrality. When you're neutral, you're taking yourself out of being charged up or down or in or out. Being neutral is allowing things to be what they are without any interference or judgment.

Being neutral doesn't mean you have to stop being involved or moving forward. You may not have any choice but to be very much involved and active. If you're in the midst of a raging river going downstream, you're definitely moving. There are practical things to do, like keep your head above water if you want to get your next breath. There may be a very intense desire to get that next breath. The divine power inside can transcend what you think, feel or judge about your experience just so you can get that next breath.

I encourage people to have wonderful intentions. It's very important to realize that we are creators. What we hold in our consciousness creates. What we focus on creates. It's important to know what you want to do. And if your experiences don't match up with what you want in your life, then that points out you have choices.

Regardless of your intentions, choose to be accepting. That's an important first step. How do you do that? By allowing things to be what they are without resistance or objection. That's easy to say. It's another thing when we don't like it. We may disagree. We may feel impatient as in, "I want it now!" That's fairly common and human. It's our choice to shift back into neutrality, to accept as we do our best to move forward on our intentions, remembering it all takes place in Spirit's timing.

Spiritually, we do have it right here and now. It's all present spiritually. However, this is the level where there's the rub or friction. In the friction, we find out how strong we are in our intention. We see how much willingness we have to keep going and adjusting to whatever is working here and now.

Choosing Neutrality with Others

You may wonder, "What if somebody doesn't treat me very nice? What's that about?"

First of all it's about them. It's not first of all about you. How someone expresses themselves is first about them.

"What if they're saying things about me that are mean and blaming? What if they're finding me at fault?" You can be neutral with that because that's an option. It's your choice how you react. You can also look and see if there's information there for you. Maybe there's an opportunity for your learning.

For example, perhaps someone is upset with you because you're stepping on their toes, literally or figuratively. You can move. You can adjust. Often how we get along is when we move into the second law of Spirit which is cooperation. When we choose to cooperate, we find out how to harmonize with others, to be in accord. What cooperation asks of us is to have vigilance or watchfulness. It asks us to have wakefulness so we're awake, alert and aware. Then we can respond accordingly and in cooperation for the greater good.

For another example, if you were going to leave a room by trying to go directly through a wall instead of the doorway, you wouldn't be cooperating with what is there for you as a better choice. You'll run into the wall, and you won't be able to leave the room. You could then choose to move into neutrality by seeing that experience as providing information to help you realize where you missed or are off track.

Some people might react with something like, "That wall shouldn't be there. That's unfair! That's a bad wall." They're upset and indignant about the wall. They want to move the wall and may even demand you move that wall. They don't have to be all upset about the wall when there's an opening right there. However, they may still choose not to cooperate. They may reject an opening and say, "That's

Regardless of your intentions, choose to be accepting. That's an important first step. How do you do that? By allowing things to be what they are without resistance or objection. That's easy to say. It's another thing when we don't like it. We may disagree. We may feel impatient as in, "I want it now!" That's fairly common and human. It's our choice to shift back into neutrality, to accept as we do our best to move forward on our intentions, remembering it all takes place in Spirit's timing.

Shifting Into Neutrality: Moving Forward God's Way

not my opening. My opening should be right here where this wall was.” Obviously, if people want to get upset, that’s their option. They can find a reason to be upset. But that’s not the best choice.

If you hear yourself saying things like, “I’ve got a bad feeling today. I’ve just got a feeling it’s going to be bad,” then ask yourself what you’re doing. Maybe you’re aware that something very challenging is going to happen. That’s different from bad. Bad is an interpretation. It’s a judgment. Instead, you can move into neutrality and say, “My consciousness is warning me to be careful, prepared and have extra caution today.”

Ask yourself if your concerns are based in fear or awareness. Awareness would be your natural knowing or intuition. Be cautious with things like superstitions and beliefs passed down from family or ancestors. You are responsible to check things out. What is your experience? What do you know in your natural knowing? If you don’t have the experience yet, if you’re not clear inside, then stay open to your learning.

Check It Out

Sometimes others can help you with their experiences and learning. For example, if someone says, “Hey, I’ve been down that road and there’s a big cliff. Watch out!” that could be very helpful and caring. Then again, maybe they’re deceiving you. Maybe there’s something really good down that road, but they don’t want you to go there for whatever are their personal reasons. Just because somebody says something doesn’t mean it’s true. So check it out.

There’s a lot of responsibility in this level to check things out, to be aware and conscious of your experience. Keep moving yourself into a place that’s calm, clear, peaceful, up, and enduring. If something is difficult for you, remember that one of the great truths on this level is this too shall pass. There’s nothing in this world that’s going to last.

In the spiritual realm, a lifetime in this world is a blink. It’s an important blink, but it’s still just a blink. It’s not all that long. One of the things that happens in this world is that God slows things down so we can handle them. When you start understanding that, you can realize, “Things are really dense here, so I can learn at my speed. As I learn, I move on and I graduate. I go on to something else that’s now on purpose for me.”

As we progress spiritually, we realize that a lot of things on this level are no longer our level of concern. We’ve been there. We’ve done that. Or we’ve heard enough so we know we don’t want to go there.

Every day we have opportunities to realize what’s on purpose for us. We then make decisions accordingly. It ends up being very ordinary, like putting food on our plate or gas in the car or shoveling snow off the sidewalk --- ordinary practical things to take care of our level of responsibility in this world.

For example, as a caring person, part of your caring may extend to making sure it’s not slippery when you or someone else walks on the sidewalk near your home. You care about yourself and you care about them. So you shovel the snow off the sidewalk.

What if nobody’s come up the sidewalk for six months? Why would you still shovel the sidewalk? It’s an exercise in discipline. God knows what you are doing. God walks to your house. So who are you really caring for? It’s part of a loving gift to God when you choose to shovel the sidewalk.

These are the little victories available to us. By doing good, we can start overcoming anything like a down feeling or a down moment. Choose to keep going after each triumph. Do a little good here, a little good there. It all adds up.

Looking at Karma with Neutrality

Sometimes life comes along and smacks you anyway. Karma is like that sometimes. It can be unexpected, unwanted and it can hurt. Are you being punished? You can look at your experiences in that way. But I encourage you instead to look at karma as an experience and a balancing action.

When karma involves you, it’s yours. There’s no sense in trying to deny it or reject it. Your protesting and denying won’t help you. Move into acceptance. You’re going to have to deal with whatever it is, so you might as well deal with it now. And dealing with it now may be about cleaning up a mess, making it better somehow or dusting off yourself and moving on.

Choose for the greater good, and remember that you’re learning. Your life is teaching you what you need to learn. That applies to all the conditions, all the people, all the time. None of us are finished yet. We’re all moving toward completion. So do more of those things that are for your fulfillment. As you choose your fulfillment, you demonstrate that you’ve overcome the world. That’s the Christ consciousness. That’s your heritage.

Christ Consciousness & Loving It All

A good way to get in tune with the Christ consciousness is to love yourself and understand that you’ve been chosen. You’ve been chosen to pick up your life and move it into the Christ. We’ve all been chosen. Some don’t choose back or they do it to a lesser degree. In the Movement of Spiritual Inner Awareness, we’re going for the full one hundred percent.

There’s an amazing aspect to that one hundred percent. It’s called grace. So if you do the best you can, then the Christ consciousness completes what you don’t do. The Christ consciousness picks up whatever is your debt or your incompleteness. It picks it up, and it fulfills it. Then you go free. Free is free. It’s not like a limited version of freedom that’s still attached or in bondage. It’s unconditional.

We’re on a path where we’re going to triumph. So claim it. Then get busy matching up your intention with how that intention works in this world. There are some big keys, like the Spiritual Laws John-Roger has defined, and they’re primarily working through loving it all. More and more, it becomes a process where you’re in grace. There’s more happiness, and there’s joy and peace.

This world is not our world. It’s a temporary waystation, basically. But it’s an on-purpose waystation. This world is tremendously good in what it delivers for us for our learning, upliftment and growth.

One of the amazing qualities of this world is how multi-dimensional it is. It’s vastly diversified. Yet what concerns us is right here and now. So you don’t have to go anywhere. There’s nothing lacking or missing here and now. You just deal with what you’re finding here in the present moment. These are often the little things that bring a smile to your face or maybe a smile to somebody else’s face.

As I was driving the other day, I saw an older man with a cane standing on the corner. He seemed rather weak and frail. Nearby, was a young father with a baby carriage. The father had two babies in the carriage who were both very much awake and moving around. The older man smiled and waved to the babies as they passed by him, but the father didn’t notice. He seemed caught up with getting into the car and on their way. I was struck that the older man was noticing something really grand going on right then in that moment. Although he looked weak and even shaky, he turned to notice and appreciate the joy in the moment while the father seemed to be preoccupied and in a rush.

In Spirit, there is no urgency. That’s one of the basic teachings. So where’s the urgency? In our perceptions in the world. And what do we do when we are in a hurry? We often don’t catch what’s really on purpose right now.

Did you know that Christ walked right by you today? How would you know? Maybe the Christ was dressed like an old man or even a thief, and you didn’t take a moment to look inside there and see the Christ. If you look from the eyes of the Christ consciousness, you can see the Christ in others. You can see the Christ even when someone’s disagreeing with you or is upset with you. What a moment to say, “I see the Christ in you.” You can choose to see what it is within them past their behavior or their words.

The more you can see the Christ within, the more you can realize your life doesn’t have anything missing in it. There’s no lack in it. Even if somebody says, “You’re fired! Get your stuff out of the desk by 5:00!” there’s really nothing missing. You can choose an attitude of neutrality which is on track with your spiritual progression.

As soon as you respond with dread, reluctance or resistance, that’s not who you are in the truth of your being. That’s moving away from neutrality and into a false self. So as soon as somebody expresses through that negativity, consider they’re saying, “I’m expressing my false self.” When we’re speaking from our false self, that’s a misinterpretation of who we are.

*Blessing
Father, we ask for Your blessing and Your light to clear whatever has been brought up here so we experience the healing, joy, and the upliftment. We give ourselves permission at every level, especially with the past and our judgments towards ourselves or others, so we set ourselves free. We release all these judgments and come into Your adoration, the love that is unconditional. We accept it, and we claim it as our divine heritage.*

Baruch Bashan

Letting the Love Out

I encourage you to be very caring toward yourself, and extend that caring to others. Be nicer, so you’re nicer to yourself and nicer to others. It’s not about your ability. It’s about your willingness.

If you say what’s in your heart, you’re just speaking what’s true. It’s not necessarily something you’re going to be comfortable with. But if you’re willing to do this, it will liberate you.

Nobody does well when they’re afraid to love. It’s a form of imprisonment, and the heart doesn’t like it. So you have to be your own liberator. Part of it is just being more yourself and giving yourself permission to do what you love. Then it’s liberating.

Unconditional loving opens you up so it will come through you. You’ll experience it. Often the way it reflects to us is as feeling love for a person or thing. We may experience it as the love is out here in the world. The reality is we opened up to our love inside, and it’s connected to whoever and whatever is reflecting it back to us. It could be the dog, your neighbor, what’s in the sky or even the weather. Allow your loving to go out regardless.

You can always turn up your loving. You can be somebody that wherever you go you take the time to be loving. Even if you’re waiting in line to pay for your groceries, you can specialize in loving the different kinds of gum at the checkout stand. Sounds silly? Rather than judge your loving, you can choose to love the different kinds of gum or the different colors on the wrappers. You can appreciate the graphic artist who designed the wrapper and the factory workers who helped process the gum inside.

Choose to engage with your life more fully than you are doing. Instead of waiting for something to happen, like you’re waiting for your love’s ship to come in, be that love ship. It begins right here where you are now. If you can solve it in this moment, it has the same application to the next moment. So that means you know how to love. That means you’re lovable. As soon as it happens once, it can happen again.

These moments will start transforming you, so you have a life that starts becoming different. You’re letting the love out. That’s going to work. It has to. It’s the greatest force in this world. So when people are unhappy or unsatisfied, they need to let the love out. That’s the bottom line. We need to love and be loved. That’s everybody’s truth. When we’re loving and being loved, everything is right.

Loving It All

John-Roger has said, “Out of God comes all things.” So if you’re upset and in disagreement, that’s an accusation that eventually goes to God. Then you’re choosing to be in separation from your divinity.

I suggest you come into good terms with God. You can begin with neutrality where you just let go of the issues. You can say, “God, I’m letting go of the way you treated me in the form of _____. That can be in about a relationship, your work, your body, etc. Instead of having an argument or disagreement with God, let go and trust. That’s a choice that will let you be freed up so you can be more fully in your life now.

Remember, everybody is doing the best they can with what they know and with what they’re working with considering the conditions they’re in. So why judge anybody including yourself? Everyone is dealing with their own pain, their own limitations, their own learning. That’s why they behave the way they do.

When you come into understanding, which is the third law of Spirit, then you won’t hold it against them. You may not want to participate in it, which is understandable. You have a responsibility to take care of yourself. So that would mean you can say, “No, I don’t want that” or “I don’t permit that.”

Some conditions in life are like, “Tough, it’s going to be that way anyway.” You may say to somebody “Stop hurting me,” and they may say “No, I’m going to hurt you anyway.” If that happens, you still have a choice not to allow how you’re being treated to internalize. Don’t dishonor yourself when others do things that seem dishonorable. Choose to hold in your dignity and love yourself regardless.

Your dignity is always present with you. If we erase the way you were treated, your dignity’s there. And if we don’t erase it, your dignity is still there. So go to your dignity. Go to your integrity. Say to yourself, “I’m a good person regardless of how anyone treated me.”

No one is responsible for your happiness. So choose to have more fun, more enjoyment, more appreciation, more smiling, particularly with the little things in life, the routine things. The ordinary, practical little things have a way of transferring over to greater things. So love the little things in your life.

Be in love with your life. Love your past, and love your present. And when faced with challenges, shift into neutrality. Choose acceptance as you love it all. Then you are loving as God loves always in all ways.

AN INTERVIEW WITH RUSSELL BISHOP

BY DAVID SAND

One of the early pioneers in the field of large group personal development, Russell Bishop created Insight Seminars with John-Roger in 1978. After many years as a successful business consultant and, more recently, blogger and Editorial Director for the Huffington Post's GPS for the Soul, he has started to work more closely with Insight again. We interviewed him in February just after he co-facilitated a large Insight I in Santa Monica, California that was attended by many MSIA ministers and initiates, including John Morton.

DS: What is Insight and how does it differ from MSIA and PTS programs such as MSS, DSS, etc?

RB: I think the best answer to that is to ask why Insight in the first place? Back in 1977, as I was running personal growth and transformation workshops for Lifespring, I was also about four years into the teachings of J-R. I was calling in the Light in these seminars and telling people about the Traveler, but the organization was kind of resistant.

I had been to a number of MSIA conferences and retreats and saw people who were really leftover hippies. It seemed like the prevalent idea was what I called “poor is pure” thinking – that to study spiritually you couldn’t do okay in the physical world. So one summer day in 1977 I wrote a note to J-R saying, “The spiritual teachings are great and I can’t tell how anyone is doing spiritually, but, boy oh boy, people in MSIA sure seem to struggle with everyday life in the world. I’d like to suggest a seminar that can help people do well in the world while remaining in alignment with the spiritual teachings.”

He called me a couple of days later, we talked about it, and the long and short of it is that we elected to test what became known as Insight. We created Insight asking ourselves, “How do you take these spiritual teachings and translate them into something practical, something can help in the every day process of living in the world?”

I suggested that Insight did not need to repeat the spiritual teachings; rather we would focus on the universal underpinnings of the spiritual work, something that would work for just about any religion, dogma, or particular practice, including MSIA. We tried to make it so that people from any walk of life could benefit from Insight. For example, the ideas of responsibility and accountability are both universal as well as neutral in terms of any particular dogma or religion. By taking this more universal approach, we were looking to create something that work for just about anyone regardless of religious or spiritual reference points.

Loving is one of those universal principles that is clearly not the domain of any given religion. My basic premise was that the underlying motivation behind just about every human behavior is that people are hoping to experience security, peace, happiness and love. For instance, the exercises dealing with symbols vs. experience that we do in Insight are based on this principle—that everyone is looking for the same experience, they’re just pursuing different things that symbolize that experience.

So we said, “Let’s put a seminar together to help people explore what they’re doing in life, what results it’s producing, what results they’d prefer, and then give them practical tools to get there.” Metaphorically speaking, if you keep making a left turn whenever it’s time to make a right turn, how do you notice the right turn sign when it shows up next time? That’s a general introduction to why we created Insight.

DS: What was the relationship like between Insight and MSIA in those early days and how are things different today?

RB: Whereas J-R has given us thousands, if not tens of thousands of techniques, very few of us use even a handful. Over time, MSIA and PTS began offering courses that take those teachings and techniques and break them down into very small segments where people can experience practical steps. In many ways, that’s the same thing that Insight is about: let’s go through it, learn it, apply it, and take it away. So now we have an abundance of different classes and workshops.

We’re all taking the MSIA teachings that J-R has brought forward and making them specific and practical. Insight is just more broad in its reach. We take the core spiritual teachings, deliver them in generic terms and help people apply them to specific areas of their lives.

The work is all fruit from the same tree so in many ways the work is the same, just different.

DS: I was in the Insight I for the last few days, not having done Insight in quite a while. The way I experienced it was that it’s the same teachings as in MSIA, but it felt more grounded. Often in MSIA classes I know something has happened, and there are all kinds of shifts inside, but sometimes they are less definable. In Insight there was a clarity on the physical level that I really enjoyed.

RB: My ministerial blessing is clarity. It’s about clarity in thought, clarity in speech, and clarity in action; with the caveat “as long as I don’t try.” So for me, it’s really about showing up and being present. When I’m present, the clarity comes in, and then I have an ability to translate it into terms that are clear, and then translate it into action choices that are clear.

J-R and I talked a lot about this both in the the creation of Insight as well as in the constant refining of the seminars once we got going. At the time, it seemed as though some people were doing the teachings at a more disconnected, less grounded level. We looked at how we could break the teachings down into practical, observable steps which would make a difference in people’s lives. In many ways, that’s an ongoing need which is still present.

I think that’s one reason why I’ll be at the Best of Super II in May this year. In 2012, I wrote a letter to J-R and said, “The Travelers do work at that level, and Michael does work at his level, and what I can add is the translation piece, ‘Now what are you going to do with all that?’” If you’ve been around MSIA long enough, you keep hearing the same questions over and over again, and sometimes it’s from the same people over and over again. The issue may be less about the answer and more about the ability to translate the answer into something that helps move things forward on this level as well as working on the inner planes.

DS: I found the same thing. The way I see it, J-R plays all the roles—he is extremely spiritual and extremely grounded at the same time. And now that J-R is not as active, we need different people to play all the different roles that J-R played on his own. So to me it’s unlikely that there’s going to be one person up on stage anymore because J-R is so evolved that he can have all those different aspects in one body, and that’s not a common occurrence.

RB: J-R has talked a lot about multi-dimensional consciousness, being simultaneously aware on all the levels. And that’s obviously the great gift that J-R brings, to be able to be present on all of those levels. He will speak from one level, but he’s in all of them.

DS: So after you created Insight with J-R, you left the organization and did other work for a while, and then came back. Why did you decide to do something else, and then why did you decide to come back?

RB: At the very beginning it was MSIA ministers and initiates who took the Insight Trainings. But there were only 5000 of us around the world, so it was pretty clear that we were going to run out of participants pretty quickly. We needed to have new people coming in, graduating, and referring new people.

The more we focused on making the work more widely available, the more we understood the need to run Insight as a business. It’s a service business to be sure, but even the Salvation Army has to bring in more money than it sends out, or it isn’t going to be around. Insight was experiencing the same issue.

When we started Insight, I didn’t know anything about business other than the simplest of common sense. As we were growing and needed better business skills, we were fortunate to have Jeff Bowden come through Insight. Jeff was a senior member of a major consulting firm and he could see that we didn’t have some of the basic business structures that we needed. He could also see we were confusing our audience with too many offerings. Within the first two or three years we must have had ten or fifteen different trainings, but there was no order or logic to them, so the market would get confused. People would think, “Well there’s too many seminars, so I just won’t do anything.”

He suggested that first we focus on a core set of offerings, so we created Insight I, II, III and IV. We could offer workshops on different themes, but there was a clear path that someone could follow. So one of our first areas of focus, in business terms, was to create a clearly defined product line.

But then there were issues with the actual day-to-day running of the business. Jeff volunteered to give me what he called “an MBA in real time.” We started reorganizing, and he showed us some very basic accounting principles.

As Insight grew, we developed some business-oriented trainings in response to requests from grads. David Allen joined me, and we began focusing on programs designed for the business community. At the same time, Insight was becoming over-extended, with too much overhead, offices, and staff. We basically ran afoul of good business practices, and I wasn’t always the most gracious person about that—a little “edgy” in contemporary terms, or what used to be called “arrogant.”

We created Insight Consulting Group (ICG) to offer business-oriented programs within Insight. ICG brought in a lot of money for the organization but eventually due to various personality conflicts—which could also be called my karma, or what I needed to learn in this life—Insight wound up under the leadership of others. I went out into the world and did what I could to continue the work in different areas. I wound up doing my own business consulting work using the tools we had developed in Insight combined with lessons learned working with a variety of business organizations.

In many ways, I liken my sojourn to the journey described in J-R’s seminar, “My Kingdom for a Horse.” I was out there learning lots of things. One thing that became clear to me was that I was learning lessons that would be valuable for the Insight organization, but I didn’t know when it would be used, or how, or any of that.

I think that one of the things that we didn’t do very well over the years was to stay in touch with who wants this work, how they want to receive it, etc. Basically, we didn’t adapt to changes in the world of personal growth and awareness. By contrast, MSIA and PTS recognized that they had a whole lot of people who would attend something online, and they now offer lots of programs that can be attended online as well as in person. I’ve conducted some PTS online workshops over the past year and they’re great. If people have only a couple of hours, there are offerings for that, or if they have a couple of days, they can do something like the IHOP workshop, either in person or online. In other words, PTS has done a great job of recognizing and adapting to the way people want to consume this kind of information and work. The message remains the same, but the packaging has changed.

A couple of years ago, I started being called inwardly to come back in. I had a lovely experience at the 2011 Living in Grace retreat where some blocks were removed from me that opened the door to even more awareness. Then this past year I started having a lot of J-R dreams, experiences in s.e.’s, and J-R appearances, and sometime around winter of 2012 I started getting that I just needed to write. I wrote to J-R and John saying, “Hey, I don’t know what this is, but it seems like I’m being called forward again. I can imagine helping any of these organizations, so if you want me to do something, let me know.” There wasn’t any response.

I “got” it again in the spring, so I wrote again. This time I said I could start picking up where Insight began, translating these teachings into the practical, and I could imagine working in the Best of Super II. As we talked about earlier in this interview, the Traveler could do the Traveler’s teaching, Michael Hayes could do the karmic flows, and I could help people ground that in physical reality.

Somewhere in there, someone responded, “Hmmm... interesting,” and so we began a conversation. Then in the summer I had a very strong J-R dream, where the whole MSIA family was at the top of the tallest building in a sea of tall buildings. J-R was pointing to different buildings, saying, “Well, there’s work going on there, and there’s work going on here...” The way I interpreted it was that those are layers of consciousness where different mystery schools or teachings were taking place.

All the buildings were shades of gray and on the ground was this very colorful pool, much like you see in a tropical setting, with some people around. J-R said, “And that’s Insight down there.” At first I thought he was saying, “And they’re just down there playing around.” Then I began to see that that’s the area that will attract people so they can move to whatever the next layer of school is for them.

This was right at the time of the trip to the UK and J-R’s birthday. People were already out there and with some nudging from Heide Banks, I got that I was supposed to go to London. So, I got on a plane, flew to London and hung out with Jsu, Nat and John, and got to spend a couple of hours just sitting next to J-R on a couch—wherever in the universes J-R was—and I was right there being zapped with the energy. After that trip I began to get clearly that there was another role for me in the Traveler’s work.

That’s what started the notion of me doing the Best of Super II. So we created the November guest event for Best of Super II. We had we had about 150 people attend in person, and we went through a sampling of what the Best of Super II will be. John would work with a person, then Michael, and then me. The response to that was pretty strong. A lot of people said, “Wow, that really helped, that was the last little grounding piece that I needed,” as we talked about before.

That also opened up a conversation about Insight. The seminars for years have been in decline in enrollment but costs don’t decline. My point of view is that Insight still has enormous value and needs to come back into a stronger presence. The work is superb as ever, so it’s not fixing anything about what Insight offers; it’s about developing a strong presence supported by sound business practices.

Earlier this year, I was invited to be on the board, and to take a role in revitalizing the trainings along with some of our business practices. Revitalization looks like doing a couple of things. First of all, the training had been shortened over the years, and a few processes were deleted. So in the February Insight I in Santa Monica, we put some of that back in along with a few new exercises. I am continuing to work with Mary Ann Somerville, Joey Hubbard and Candace and Stu Semigran to find the best format for the seminar, integrating the best of the new and original approaches.

We also need to take a look at what else we can do to make Insight more relevant for today’s world. The teachings are timeless, so it’s not about a new teaching, but it’s about new packaging.

People born in the last twenty to thirty years were born into a very different world than the world that saw Insight come into existence. In many ways, the issues are the same fundamentally, but the way those issues are presented is different. When we created Insight, no one had texting and cell phones and email and all those kinds of distractions; the term 24/7 hadn’t been coined, much less lived. People weren’t multi-tasking. In today’s world we need to think about how we take this information and make it available to people who are living a more pressure-packed existence. Same message, but different packaging.

RUSSELL BISHOP

(Continuing)

So that’s where I am right now. I’m starting to look at the core message and how it needs to be packaged for today’s always connected/never connected world. What do we need to be distributing digitally? What do we need to be distributing in person? In fact, some friends of mine who are really big in the millennial world are starting to notice that people now are demanding more in-person work. They’re noticing they can’t get the quality they want in just purely digital form. So, we have another fun challenge – how to make this work available in many different forms and formats.

We seem to be moving to a hybrid world, and that’s what is so lovely about what Paul Kaye is doing with IHOP. You can be in the room during the weekend workshop, or you can experience the same work in an online format—so now we’ve started to hybridize the experience, to let people match themselves to it, without saying “Well, you only get it in format A.”

DS: You just co-facilitated an Insight I. What kinds of differences have you noticed between the people at trainings today and people who came when you first started Insight?

RB: What’s really interesting is that back in the ’70’s and ’80’s people were impatient in one respect, and people today are impatient but in another way. If you take someone who was thirty in the ’80’s there was a quality of impatience that said, “I don’t have time for this, let’s get on with it.” So their impatience was “Don’t waste my time – I don’t see the value in this.” Today, the people who are in their twenties or thirties have a different kind of impatience. They say, “Don’t waste my time – I don’t have the patience to stay shallow, let’s go deep.” They’re really asking how quickly can they get deep.

That’s a very hopeful sign to me. People are starting to notice that Facebook isn’t necessarily deep. A Twitter account will never get deep. It might get broad, but it won’t get deep. I think people are starting to notice the gap and are asking for a quality, depth and richness of experience.

During this last Insight, we had several of the younger folks come up and say, “I’m struggling here.” I’d ask, “What are you struggling about?” They’d say, “Well, it’s not getting very deep very fast.” That’s very different from, “I’m struggling with this because I don’t see why this matters,” which is what I heard in the ’80’s. Now, I’m hearing, “I know this matters, can we stop pussyfooting around and get into it?”

DS: So it sounds like you’re saying there’s a greater level of awareness and sophistication about spirituality.

RB: There’s something happening there, but I don’t know yet how to define that. I know if J-R were sitting here with us, he’d probably have something to add to it, but he’d probably also say, “I’d like to look at that some more.” He was always good at looking at something for a good year, or two, or three before he moved on it. He wanted to be certain he saw it accurately. So I’m not sure what it is that’s happening, but something is happening.

I think it could be a host of things. It could be that people are bored to tears with reality shows, because there is no reality to them. It’s just animation and exaggeration of human experience. They’re looking at the amplitude between the people’s highs and lows, as opposed to be where people usually live.

I think so much has been made about the need for connection, and so many tools have come into the world, whether it’s social media or Google Hangouts or whatever. Google, Facebook and various social media keep changing because they haven’t landed on what it is, but they’ve landed on the nerve, which is the need for connection. Facebook has become an “everything,” a place to put up pictures, with ads and spam, etc. It’s become a platform that will have to really figure out what purpose it’s serving if it really wants to promote connection.

The term “friend” has become an extremely useless term in cyberspace and yet people know that there’s something they want called a “friend.” So what does friendship really mean? Something is emerging that’s almost like an existential angst that says that all this stuff that is supposed to provide meaning isn’t doing it.

So that deeper sense of felt need for meaning is arising, and those of us who can meet that will provide a great service and do well in the process. And I think that’s our challenge: Do great service and do it well. In the conscious capitalism world they call it “Do well by doing good.” And that’s what’s ahead of us.

DS: It sounds almost as though you are talking about a speeding up of people’s evolution, because in the past people had to go through a long period of experiencing the world to find out the emptiness of a lot of the outer stuff, so that they would be motivated to go back inside. And now there’s so much outer stuff that people are getting that learning faster.

RB: Someone I was reading just recently described it as “We’re leaving the age of ‘me,’ and entering the age of ‘we.’” You see that in people who are ecologically conscious, socially conscious, whether it’s animal rights, or human rights, or just planetary rights. There is a sense that there is a “we” here. Now, the older folks who are running the banks and economic systems may not get that yet. But people coming up underneath it are running from a different value set. How they got that value set could be from their parents who went through the various ups and downs and struggles, or it could be just because it’s karmically time for it on the planet. I don’t know, but it is definitely happening and moving faster.

DS: How will the marketing of Insight need to change to keep up with that?

RB: What we used to do was simply talk about the seminar and say, “Trust me, it’s good for you, so come do it. And bring a friend.” That’s still a good thing and it can work pretty well.

However, I think we need to engage in more assertive awareness marketing, targeting the issues people are struggling with. We just need to come out and name the real issues people are struggling with – relationships, money, career, insecurity, etc.

It’s like the folks who were saying during the recent Insight weekend, “Hey, go deep, go quick, just cut to the chase.” One of the things I found is that if you can name the issue someone’s struggling with, they look at you differently. They think, “if you know enough to ask that question, you must know a lot about the answer.”

We need to frame the challenges that people are living in ways that match their reality. I think the biggest challenge is to frame core life issues in ways that assure people that we understand and that we can provide some measure of help, but that ultimately they already have the ability to resolve their own issues. So it’s not about acquiring something you don’t have, it’s about unlocking the access to the tools that you already have.

Will social media be part of that? Sure. Not just in some kind of friend or hangout, but much more in social engagement. We need to create places for people to explore issues that they are facing. Many businesses today are busy touting their solutions in a variety of quick fix offerings. We need to frame the issues people are dealing with, then suggest things that can be done, and then give them a basket of choices.

People absolutely want choices today. They don’t want “my way or the highway.” So marketing will be very big. It will be marketing that offers something of immediate value. For example, one of the things we need to do is to have more free courses, so people can come in, sample it, and find out if it’s for them. They don’t have time to run around and spend five days to find out that wasn’t it. We need look at what we can do in an hour, or in five minutes.

We could develop some apps. I’m not sure exactly what kind yet, but maybe you’re struggling with relationship issues, so we have a relationship-just-in-time app. People find themselves in their stuff, like, “Oh God, here I go again, now what?” And then an app reminds you of a process, or it brings up a meditation that you and your partner can do together right now. It could be a choice app, where you think, “I’m stuck, I don’t know where to go,” and the app goes, “Great, we’re going to give you a series of questions and as you answer you’ll start laying out your roadmap for what to do.”

People are still consuming in these small formats, and they will continue to do so. We simply need to begin to make them more available. I was involved creating an app with the Huffington Post called “GPS for the Soul.” One of the promises there is that we can start to create circles with whom we share what our “GPS guides” are—things that get us back on course.

There’s also whole new form of “gamification” that is taking shape. Games always attract people, they love to play and they love the notion of winning, etc., but historically, games have been structured as a win-lose proposition. There’s a new form of gamification where you might share something you are working on or struggling with, and you post it through the social circle you wish to share it with. I notice your post, and go, “Hey, what’s up? Can I help?” Just by that response, I win points. I’m winning points for my ability to engage and support. You come back and say “That was helpful.” Now my point value just went up, because it wasn’t just some algorithm that says that if you use the right kind of words you win points. The user validated that it was useful, and my points go up. There are even some new players in this world that are pairing up “players” with social venture funds so that points can be turned into donations to not-for-profit organizations. Now we have people cooperating instead of competing in ways that not only benefit them as individuals but good causes as well. Talk about Win-Win!

Where is this going to go? It beats the socks off of me. But one of the things we need to do—and I say that “we” meaning we MSIA, we PTS, we Insight, we USM, we all of these organizations—we need to get out of the small we, and get into the big we. What’s the big we? Not just the little we that keeps talking to itself, and congratulating itself on what good work it does. But how do you make that good work available so that people know it’s available?

That’s what I mean about how we need to meet these folks where they live, where they are, on their iPhone, or online, or in their games, or wherever it is. There are ways to do that. We just have to get interested enough to ask the questions.

DS: Do you have goals that you have you’d like to see for Insight, in terms of how and how much you want it to expand?

RB: At this point, I don’t have particular numbers in mind, because it’s still a relatively new re-engagement for me. But what I’d like to be able to see is to have us get to the place where we have four or five very active geographical areas that are supporting people in local Insight communities. What that might look like in traditional terms might mean we have four or five Insight I’s a year in a certain area, and a similar number of Insight II’s, and so forth.

I also know that we need to create programs and offerings that can be accessed anytime, anywhere – digital formats ranging from live, streaming events to on-demand seminars or workshops. The larger objective here is to remove time, location and language as barriers so that virtually anyone can access this kind of information and life-changing work regardless of situation or circumstance. We’re a long way from that reality, but we are definitely looking in this direction.

I’d also love to see us start generating communities and followings. It would be great if we had a big Twitter account. David Allen [a well-known productivity consultant who has studied in Insight and MSIA] has a million and a quarter Twitter followers, and he’s simply tweeting out advice how to stay on top of your overflowing in-basket. Well, what if we had a million plus followers, because we’re tweeting advice about how to deal with that relationship, or that challenging situation?

So I think at some point we need to get some numbers there, but the generic version of the goal right now is that we are self-sustaining out of operations, and we use donations to fund expansion of good work—not to fund the operations.

So we need to be self-sustaining, and then... my goodness, how big is the world? There are a lot of places we could go. We need to find out how we make this available in Nigeria. That’s a hard question. If we run it from here, it’s based on U.S. economics, but Nigerian economics are way different. So how do we make the work expand? How do we fund it, how do we have it self-sustaining, in a way that’s culturally sensitive and as well as economically sensitive?

DS: It’s happened in some areas, like all of a sudden Bulgaria just exploded. How does that happen in a country so far away?

RB: Russia went really big, Omsk, and a few other places, Ukraine went big, Bulgaria went big. One of the things that those countries all have in common is coming out of decades of oppression, where there wasn’t even a concept anymore that you could have freedom of thought. There was a big need for this kind of work so we could make it available. The good news is that we have a licensing formula, where these international locations can organize and can put on seminars, and as long as they handle the licensing fee, they can price it however they want.

Insight went like crazy through South America, which did not have the same kind of repressed culture as these former iron curtain countries by a long shot. But they were countries where people were starved for the next layer of depth. They had a lot of religious connection, but not spiritual connection, if you will. So people can feel that spiritual connection and rise with it. And of course J-R was very active all across those countries for a long time which really helped.

We have to understand that while the message is universal, the packaging has to be appropriate to the culture, to the demographics, to the age group, etc. And then you have to find the right economic model to make it work in these various places.

So, boy do we need help. I know enough to ask a bunch of the right questions, but I don’t even know the questions that I don’t know to ask, much less how to answer them. That’s the vision I’m holding really, is to find the people who have that understanding of the work, who have the compassion for the work and the desire to extend it—and then away we go!

We’re all taking the MSIA teachings that J-R has brought forward and making them specific and practical. Insight is just more broad in its reach. We take the core spiritual teachings, deliver them in generic terms and help people apply them to specific areas of their lives.

The work is all fruit from the same tree so in many ways the work is the same, just different.

You are invited to come relax into the very “essence” of who you are...

“Listen attentively to whatever comes forward out of the silence.

If things start to distract and disrupt you, bring your focus back to the silence. As many times as the silence is broken, you can refocus on listening to the silence one more time.

When you practice bringing your presence into the silence, you will experience a knowing and a wisdom that will start flowing within you. It will usually bring you to a state of peace, calm, and clarity.

Then, if something comes to mind that needs to be done, instead of rushing into it, you will know that it can be accomplished in a relaxed way without breaking your connection with the inner silence.”

See what others said about the Silent Retreat:

Since the retreat, I continue doing more SEs than ever before. I feel my connection to Spirit is more readily accessible, like the channel has been cleaned out, and I go into chanting my tone much more quickly, and stay inside for longer. I also notice myself going back into “my essence” that I discovered at the retreat and that has been a tremendous tool for me. It’s hard to express how important and life-changing this experience was for me. I felt like it was an “advanced” retreat, and everyone there was so fully committed. It was a rarefied atmosphere, to be sure. – L.P.

My commitment to myself, to God, to my work here as a co-creator has been upgraded in a profound way. And I could go on describing so many ways I’m taking better care of myself, keeping my eyes on the Lord, working and living from an attitude and altitude of ‘god consciousness’, of love, of joy ... but you get the picture. Whatever happened was powerful for me. And the big point I’m trying to make ... is that it has been LASTING in a new and significant way. – Z.G.

Communing with God in nature for the weekend was a beautiful experience. I find myself more reflective, choosing my words carefully if I speak or even questioning myself if I need to speak and overall more at peace and in harmony within myself. As I write this I am reminded of something I read or heard: “Are my words true, are they necessary, are they kind?” In the last few days, I also find myself more aware of what I am doing and how I am being in the world. I am creating subtle shifts in my life and I know something amazing transpired within me at the Silent Retreat. Thank you! – K.A.

MSIA Beginnings Around the World

Honoring J-R's 50 Years as the Traveler

*New Column about MSIA Communities Worldwide
And we're looking for your memories*

Have you ever wondered how MSIA London got started, or Boston, Miami, Philly, Minneapolis? What about Kyoto and Lagos? Omsk, for goodness sake! Me too!

I'm smiling because I happen to be fortunate enough to know intimately (from my point of view as a Boston resident in 1975) how Boston was sparked and ignited into a thriving MSIA community.

Are you one of those who also know about how your community began? I'm looking for you! As long as I keep receiving your stories, this column will continue.

Here's what I'm looking for:

A few paragraphs about your most memorable moments/ hours/ days would be great. Perhaps these questions would inspire you. Or whatever you want to share with me.

- 1. What was it like when J-R came for the first time?*
- 2. What was it like to be part of creating your community?*
- 3. What was it like living where J-R seminars were held?*
- 4. Do you remember the first taped J-R seminar in your town? What was the title?*
- 5. Early staff visits to your town.*
- 6. Anything else that inspires you to write about.*
- 8. Send this to anyone else you think would like to contribute.*
- 9. And if you have any photos you could send me or scan and email to me, that would be helpful also.*

Boston Becomes an MSIA Community

by Carol Jones

It was 1975 and I was studying a form of deep massage for dancers and athletes' injuries called "Muscular Therapy." Ben, our teacher, gathered his classes from Boston, New York, Philly, and D.C. on Cape Cod for an intensive workshop/retreat. That's when I met Michael Bookbinder. He said he was an MSIA minister and he had clairvoyant abilities. One reading with Michael is what started MSIA in Boston. Michael, David Sprow and I looked all over Boston for a suitable house that would become the Boston Light Center. Then it became evident that my housemates, including my own boyfriend, would leave my house because they weren't resonating with the new and powerful spiritual focus we were feverishly gathering. A search all over Boston resulted in my very own house being transformed into the Light Center. David Sprow, David Cleveland, Inez Westerhoek (Hayes) and I were the first of a wonderful lineage of MSIAers to inhabit the Boston Light Center on Westminster Avenue, Arlington Heights.

J-R's first seminar was in 1976, just a scant year after the Light Center was established—Odd Fellows Hall—dark portraits of the Good Ole Boys lined the walls. Musty smells emanated from the old overstuffed thrones. With all the light switches flipped up, it was still dingy. But hey, the Traveler was with us, giving a seminar in Boston for the first time! J-R was heard to say he would prefer not to do a seminar in that place again!

From Monica Winston: Among the very first people in Boston to be introduced to J-R by Michael: I think the first time J-R came to Boston to the Light Center in Arlington, he and the staff were having dinner there and I was in charge of the salad. I had gone out that day looking for the freshest, most beautiful ingredients. But I didn't know about the no onion, no garlic rule, and so I put scallions in the salad and made a dressing with crushed garlic! I stayed in the kitchen and sent the salad in.....in a little while someone came out to say that J-R didn't eat garlic or onion (although the staff ate it that day), and was requesting a salad without. But I had used all of my ingredients. So I looked in the fridge and only found some old iceberg lettuce, and some other things that were on their last legs. I did my best to put together a salad for him, and made a simple oil and vinegar dressing. I felt so bad that I was giving him such a poor salad. Then he came out and thanked me for the "beautiful salad." It was an experience of being on the receiving end of such graciousness, such kindness and loving, that I remember it vividly after all of these years—37 years!

Thank you so much Carol for those early days, for bringing J-R to Boston....I am so grateful for your ministry.

The next year, the house was whipped into shape. We were ready. Here's what Inez Hayes remembers: The four of us, Carol, David Sprow, David Cleveland and myself (all with cooperation as our first area of karma), getting the old house ready for staff appointments and all of us having completely different tastes in what it should look like. Yet in about a month we managed to put in new wall-to-wall carpeting downstairs, new kitchen floors along with painting the cabinets and buying a new kitchen table and chairs; totally renovating the upstairs bathroom; new wood floors in my bedroom, and painting all the rooms. David Cleveland was still hammering upstairs minutes before J-R and the staff arrived. And it all looked really good!

I remember J-R sitting in a rocker in the front living room and telling stories. One was about when he traveled the road from Cambridge to Concord and there were still the souls of soldiers on sentry duty from the time of the Revolutionary War hovering at their posts. When J-R told them the war was over they still refused to leave their posts. J-R had to find their brigadier general because he was the only one they would obey to be dismissed.

What I remember most about the taped MSIA seminars at the Light Center was almost everyone crying through their contributions (myself included), and then the same people laughing and happy after listening to J-R. (As a neophyte it continually astounded me.)

These last memories are more personal experiences of how J-R let me know that he is always with me: During my first aura balance in Boston, J-R came upstairs to make sure my feet were warm enough and covered them with a blanket. I wondered how he knew they were cold and I was very touched that he cared so much for me. During the balance there was an inside joke, but when I came downstairs J-R knew the punch line.

At my first live J-R seminar in Boston, I was in the back of the auditorium finishing registration when a joy came up inside of me that I was "going home", and when I looked at J-R (who was facing the stage), he turned around and winked at me.

At one of the early taped MSIA seminars in Arlington Heights, I put in the Light being more aware of the Traveler in an ongoing way. The next day I had a lot of errands to run and spent most of the time driving. Every single car I stopped behind had a J-R in the license plate. It got so that I would pull up from a distance and think it couldn't happen again, but then it did!

We found a fresh and inviting location for a seminar: it was Longfellow Hall, Harvard Square. Wow, we were stoked. It was in May, and by now many of us knew that J-R brings the weather with him when he travels. Well it was a very late, wet snowstorm that laid so heavy on the power lines that it took out the power just about everywhere in Boston. From my point of view, the most important thing was that the lilacs were already in bloom and the plan was to decorate the stage with these beautiful flowers, but when I looked at them they were bent almost to the ground with snow. It was my first real evidence that the Light works. I prayed that they would survive, thrive if possible—and they did! What a beautiful stage it was!

David Jenkins recalls: A number of us, including Dianne and I, were in a spiritual group called Arica and quite pleased with it. Several of us heard about Michael Bookbinder who was giving what he called, Light Attunements as I recall. I had a reading from him as did a bunch of us. We then found out that he was giving seminars in Arlington on Monday nights. Dianne and I started going. After a bunch of weeks, Michael said that his teacher was coming to town, and he'd recommend that we go hear him. He gave a seminar in Central Square in a formal lodge hall of some kind. (This is Odd Fellows Hall as I described above.) There were big pictures on the wall and throne-like chairs on the four walls. We needed to listen to three taped seminars before we went. We squeezed these in with some difficulty.

The seminar was a little strange. Michael Sun and Edgar Veytia sang at the beginning, which was really beautiful. J-R spoke for about an hour. My thoughts about the talk were that what he said was fine, nothing shocking or surprising. But Dianne was blown away by it in some way that really got my attention. She went up to J-R afterward and said, "I love you." This was totally out of character for Dianne in those days. That shook me awake that something important was going on here.

After that night, we followed J-R around the East Coast for the rest of that East Coast trip. We went to NYC, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore and maybe someplace in Connecticut. I took some days off, but I was working at Polaroid so we did a lot of driving back and forth. Dianne and I had just signed up for a new Arica course. After three months, we noticed that we hadn't done anything on the Arica course. We said to ourselves, "It looks like we've just shifted into MSIA."

The place where Michael held his seminars became the MSIA Light Center. Services were held there. One time I went there for services and

J-R was sitting on a back porch, as I recall. I remember being worried that there weren't enough people participating in MSIA in the Boston area. I remember that he was pleased with where we were, and our future was in God's hands. That our job was not to make things happen "come hell or high water" was shocking to me.

When Insight first started, J-R and Russell Bishop went to New York City to the Light Center there, which I think was on Canal Street. There was discussion about what Insight was, but my recollection is that J-R said something like, "Those who are working with me will do Insight." Dianne and I did the first NYC training and then more and more.

There was an Insight II, which was very important to me. J-R was one of the facilitators. At one point, there were lots of people working separately somehow. At one point, J-R went to Dianne, who was lying down. In about a minute or so, he worked very fast with Dianne's legs. After he finished, he said that her body became very fluid while he was working with it. He had to work very quickly with her. The time when she was open was very short. He said that in a past life, she had been stretched through torture and some important connections in her body and legs had been pulled apart. He was reconnecting them. This became an important reference point for me.

Memories from Johanna Jenkins: I was living in a supposedly Arica house in Arlington, MA 1976-77. To my surprise and delight, Mary Ann Somerville was a housemate. I was already "into" MSIA, in that I'd read every J-R booklet I could get my hands on (including Journey of a Soul). That I shared this with Mary Ann emerged in a private conversation, and we shared the pleasure of a secret allegiance. I remember that at one point, I was signed up for and doing a meditation with Arica. Late every night I'd be sitting before my altar, attempting to follow the Arica directions. Deeply tired, I would drift off and then emerge from I knew not where chanting "HU".

I remember seminars at Carol Jones' place (the Boston Light Center). I remember bringing my daughter Emily, age 9, and her contributions. I remember my first live seminar with J-R—sitting beside Mary Ann—gales of laughter for no apparent reason. I know I'd already begun the first Discourse, and had brought with me the letter asking J-R if I might study with him. I was too shy to go up to him in person, so I handed it to one of his staff members. He took it, asked what it was, and seemed entirely puzzled as to why I was handing it to him, but agreed to pass it on to J-R. He did so—and J-R's answer is evident. The following year, I moved out to Seattle and began conducting seminars by myself. (The first people to join me there were the Funks.)

From Alissa Meredith: Those were long-ago days. I have a few specific memories. In one of the early J-R seminars (it may have been at the Odd Fellows Hall), I recall an old building with a dark auditorium on the second floor somewhere in Mid Cambridge. In any case there were people from the Arica house who did not yet have

2 taped seminars under their belt so to speak. I offered an additional taped seminar in my small and funky apartment in East Cambridge. I recall Doug Gibson and about four other people coming so that they would be able to attend J-R's live seminar. Another memory I have from the Boston Light Center from fairly early on was that J-R was coming to do Light Studies and services. He was in the middle of my Light Study and one of the cats walked into the room. It was one of the 6-toe varieties that show up in Boston on occasion. J-R said that the cat wanted to show him his extra toe, like he was bragging.

My brother John Cawley took me to a seminar on Long Island, one of the earliest in the northeast. There was a young woman who was living with her parents and she did weekly seminars often with no one but her. The night we were there it was just her, John and me. I heard that J-R told Jody that although she had few people in this dimension attend, she had lots of other beings attending.

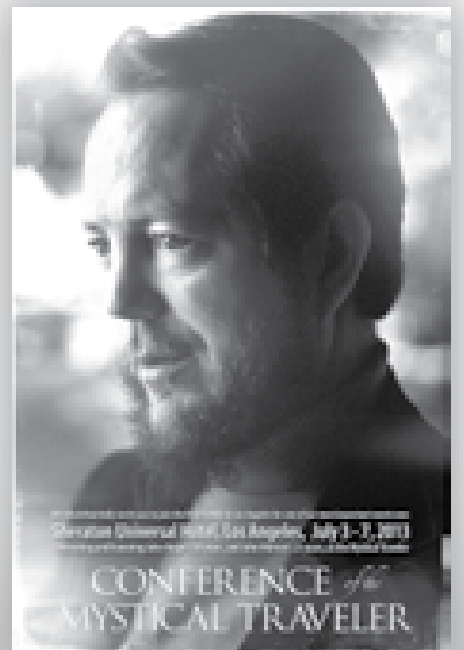

From Carol Jones: I personally want to thank the soul of Michael Bookbinder. Without Michael it might have taken a lot longer for so many of us to touch into J-R's teachings. Michael hung in in Boston until we were solidly established as lovers of Spirit and the Traveler, deeply invested in studying the teachings as brought forward by our beloved wayshower, John-Roger.

And of course my deepest gratitude goes to J-R who through all these years has loved me more than I can say or imagine.

Please carry the torch with me and send me your early memories of J-R and your community. There's so much to tell and share that opens our hearts and warms us. Send to carol@msia.org.

God bless us all,
Carol

A Tribute to Star Sabrina

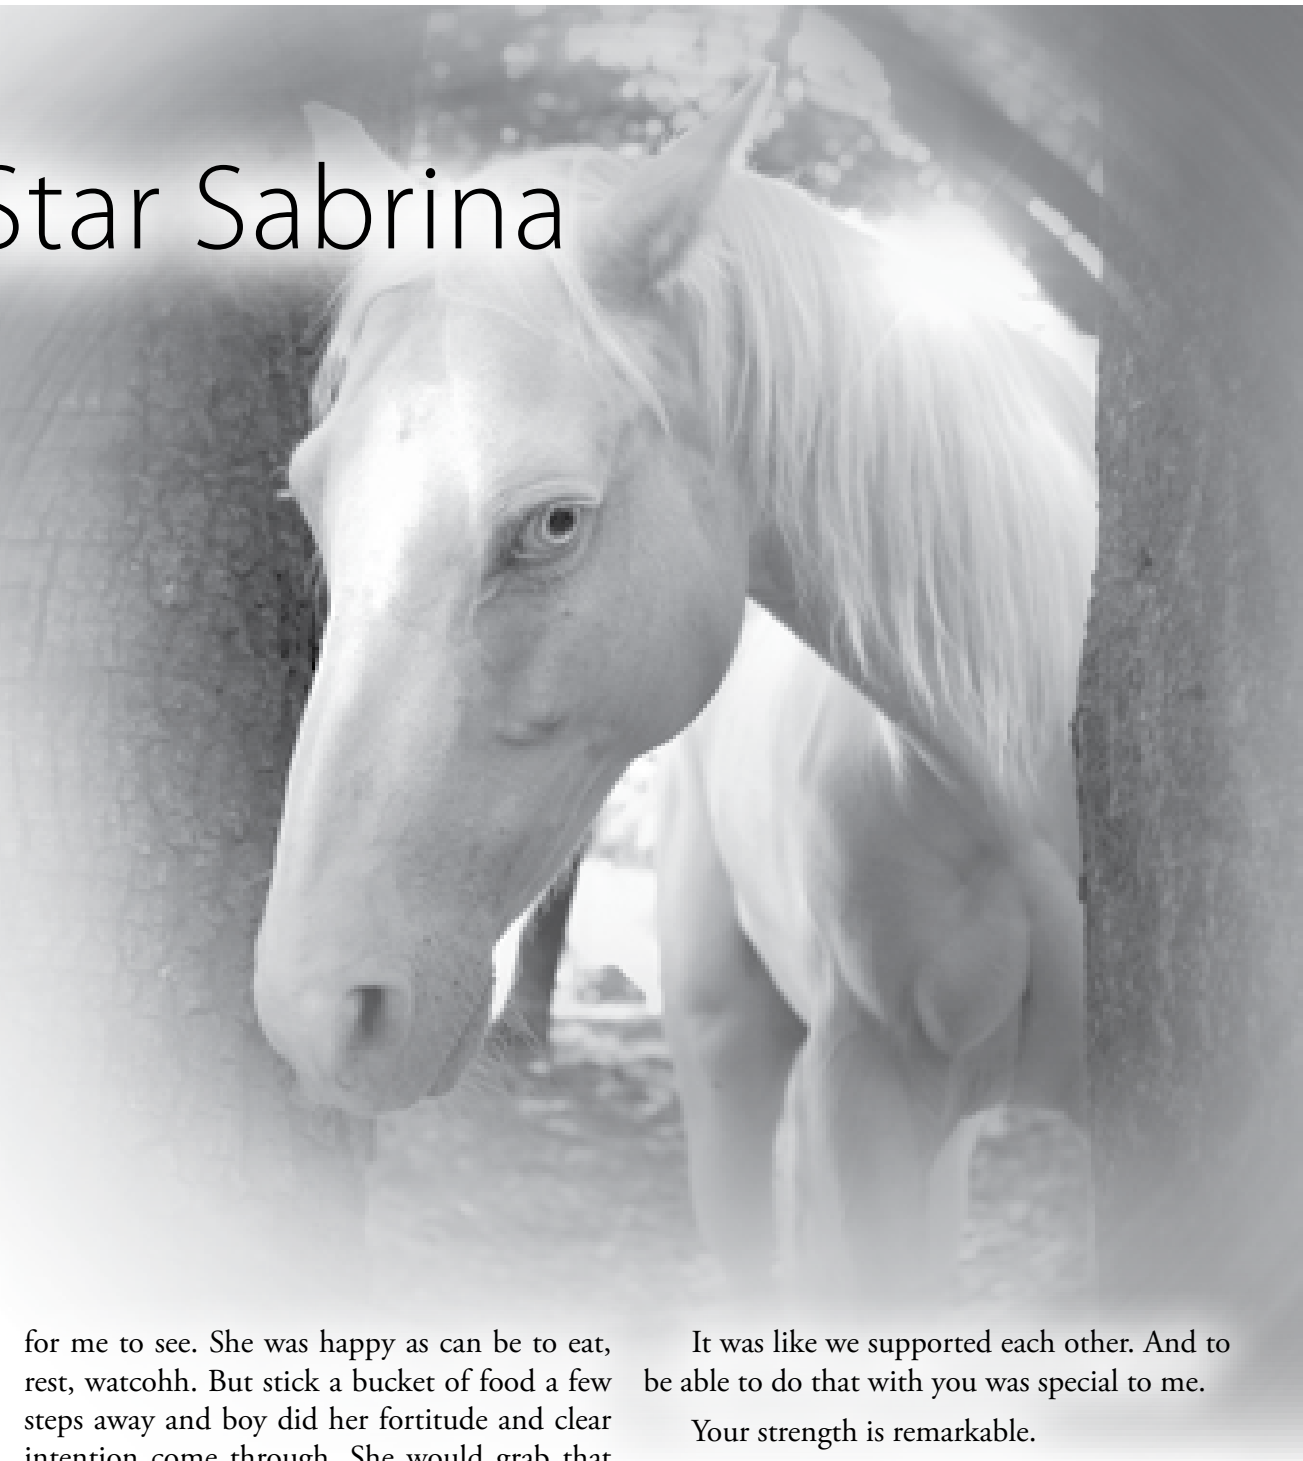

Dear Ones,

I am writing to let you know that our beloved Star Sabrina passed gently into God's arms on January 7. As some of you know, she had been dealing with problems in her feet, and even in the midst of that she remained happy and vibrant. However, her condition worsened, and we felt it was time to let her go.

Star's essential quality of Peace is "Clear Intention". In honor of Star, here are some beautiful sharings by dear friends who loved her, plus an album of nice photos.

God Bless Star and God Bless us all,

Lynn Cox

I noticed last night that the sunset was exceptionally extraordinarily beautiful, so rich with color that seemed to fill the entire sky. I thought, "That's got to be Star, just letting us know that she's here with Lynn and that what she's experiencing is rich and glorious."

Much love to you, Linda

To Star

I've heard it said that one can be of service simply by accepting service. Star, how many eyes of little girls lit up when they saw you? And how sweet it was to watch them love on you. And how many of us older guys found ourselves quietly settling into our own hearts when we were around you?

I used to love it when you'd get within a couple feet of some amazing healthy treat Lynn had put together for you in a shallow bowl, and rather than take that last step toward it, you'd reach out and pull it to you with your mouth. Classic.

When we'd gotten word that you had changed your residence, I immediately saw you flying through the universe through a flurry of stars like a very good day for "my little pony." Thank you for bringing such a sweet dimension of service and loving to Windermere.

God Bless! Dave

Before meeting Star, I had chosen Clear Intention as the quality I wanted to enhance in my life. And then I met her and understood exactly why this quality was hers. She had both peace and determination. The peace was easiest for me to see. She was happy as can be to eat, rest, watcohh. But stick a bucket of food a few steps away and boy did her fortitude and clear intention come through. She would grab that bucket by its rim and yank it toward her as if to say, "You're not getting away from me that easy!" Star demonstrated and modeled true acceptance for me. Despite health challenges, she seemed content and even pleased in her life. Thank you for that, Star. While it was no work for you, it was a great gift for me.

Kim

We feel so lucky to have gotten to be a part of Star's extended family. She had such pluck, such perseverance, such acceptance, and a shining spirit. What a special soul she was and is. We also need to acknowledge how incredibly lucky she was to have had the wonderful life she had up at Windermere and, luckier still, the incredible care and devotion and love that Lynn gave her throughout her life—that too has been beyond special!

From being a Star on earth, she is now a Star in heaven.... Love, Connie and Miranda

Star,

The time I spent with you was comfortable. I always felt so relaxed and calm around you.

I would visit you in my pajamas to braid your beautiful and graceful hair.

Then after, you would lay down with me; You rested your head on me while I rested mine against you.

It was like we supported each other. And to be able to do that with you was special to me.

Your strength is remarkable.

Always Loving You, Rachel

Dearest Star,

Throughout the year that I gratefully spent with you,

I felt an awakening into Love - You taught me this.

God Bless you, Janet

Star has indeed made her way into many of our hearts and will always be there for us. I know that is so very true for me as her love is a blessing in my life.

Her quality of clear intention stands as an endearing and loving testament for all of us. I loved her willingness to endure amidst such trying circumstances.

She never ever complained as she certainly showed a great example as one who cherishes Life regardless of (her) situation.

love, Robert

Star Sabrina, with her sweet accessibility and her mystical blue eyes, touched so many hearts through the years. She truly has been an ambassador of light and peace, and her transition into freedom is cause for celebration.

with love, Linda

I will always remember Star's bright shining expression—a look of amused and eager expectation, especially if dinner was imminent. I've thought of her often as the "little horse who could"—as she triumphed over many extreme challenges, including a serious foot injury and an attack by a mountain lion. Despite her challenges, she was an amazing example of being in the moment, of being happy with her life and grateful for what she had. Numerous times I would go into her stall, burdened by my latest "issue," and immediately I would be enfolded by Star's aura of peace and loving, which certainly would put my silly problem into perspective. When I think of Star, I imagine her running about, kicking up her heels in delight, celebrating her new way of being.

with much loving, Lynn

Oh Lynn!!

What a beautiful tribute to such a magnificent being that Star was. You served her so diligently and with such loving devotion. That was one of her many gifts to you I imagine. God Bless the Light she brought to so many and to being your friend for so long. My heart is so full thinking of her and you and what transpired between you. She was a great Blessing to you and to many. I take in her quality of clear intention this year.

LL, and Blessings, Diane

A HORSE OF COURSE!

I never viewed Star as a horse. Though she looked like a horse and smelled like a horse, and Lord knows she certainly did love her alfalfa like a horse, she did not seem to ME like a horse. Her little body was always so dwarfed by her enormous spiritual presence which was as mighty as Mt. Everest and THAT was all that I saw. She was simply my friend. A very special friend who taught me the value of another day of life, rain or shine, a precious gift to be enjoyed and appreciated no matter what. She taught me that the best place to be was in the present moment and showed me, by her lighthearted, whimsical spirit why there was always a reason to be happy. She inspired me to sing when I was around her. SING!!! How joyful our visits were together!! Yes, I would say she brought out the very best in me, a me I could actually love, a me that could actually make the world a better place. I am so blessed to have received these gifts from Star and all her love. Love that will never die and lessons I shall carry throughout the rest of my life. So was she a horse? Maybe on the outside, but on the inside she was one of my greatest teachers.

I could never thank Lynn enough for going the extra 10,000 miles of loving care for Star to keep her in our lives as long as possible. The hours and hours, day or night, of devotion and dedication that Lynn had given to Star goes so far beyond this material world and into the realm of the divine, and that is why these words could never capture the depths of the meaning of the word sacrifice.

I could never thank Windermere enough as well for trusting Lynn to do this job that NO ONE else on this planet could have done more lovingly and conscientiously, that I know for sure.

The Miracle of Our Son’s Birth and Death

from Robert Peake

One month after we opened the final flap on the Advent Calendar, a child was born. Far from the environment of a stable, the operating theatre was brightly lit, clean smelling, and sterilized. Yet when our son emerged, he did not cry. Three days later, he died in my arms.

In the past, I would have defined a miracle as a significant, often inexplicable change in a course of events toward an outcome I had been hoping for. The miracle of James coming into our life, however, was something I had never imagined would happen, and something I would not wish on anyone. Yet I still call his birth a miracle, because it transformed me. A miracle also, by definition, can be difficult to fully understand with just the mind.

Our son began communicating with me spiritually soon after my wife Val became pregnant. He came to me inwardly and said, “I am a boy and my name is James.” The words were not like hearing voices, they were more like hearing my own thoughts. The difference between this experience and my own thoughts, however, was that along with the words came a profound experience of joy, and a deep and abiding sense that all was well. The words were also extremely direct and clear, yet given casually, as one would utter a simple truth or foregone conclusion – there was no emphasis, pressure, or trying to convince me of the message. There was just a simple telling of what is.

I noted these qualities carefully. They were very much unexpected given the circumstances I found myself in at the time: pressure at work, financial concern about having a baby. I was also ambivalent about the gender or the name, whereas my wife has always been very interested in naming. So, it was pretty clear to me that this experience was not something I was necessarily consciously creating for myself out of my own desires. Still, I decided that it was important to check the information out as much as I could to see if it was accurate. Sure enough, after the first sonogram, we discovered the baby was, in fact, a boy.

James came to me in spirit again when we were in hospital, waiting to see if my wife would be induced into labor. James had stopped moving, and the doctors were concerned. As we were getting out of bed that morning, again a message came to both me and Val that everything was OK and that we could relax. It brought comfort to both of us, and so even though we were in hospital, we were not concerned about James’ well-being. It was entirely possible that he was simply too tight in there, and ready to come out. The doctors and midwives thought so as well.

So, our main focus was really on trying to have a natural delivery and birth. Then James came to me again. “I’m coming out Caesarian, like you did,” he said. I was shocked. The same qualities as before, and news I definitely didn’t want to hear. We had been preparing for months through night classes and volumes of literature to have a natural (non-surgical) birth. Yet when I told Val, the message seemed somehow accurate to her as well. Within a few minutes, the doctor came in and recommended a Caesarian delivery.

James came out without a heartbeat or breathing, but was revived very quickly, although he remained unconscious. This, in combination with the blood tests not showing any signs of oxygen deprivation in the recent past, led everyone to believe that he was going to be fine physically. Sometime after the birth, James came to me again. “I’m OK. Everything is OK. But I’m not going to live with you physically.” If I was shocked at the idea of a Caesarian delivery, I was beside myself with this new information that James might not live. Yet it came in with such profound love, joy, and simplicity. I was shocked because, like the other messages, I knew it was true. Yet I did not want to believe it, and doubted the truth of the message because it was so hard to accept. I withheld the information from Val and from my family, who were with us at the time. It felt like a great burden to carry.

My family had a hard time hearing the news from the doctors as it came in over the next few days: that they detected very little electrical activity in his brain, and that he was not breathing on his own. Seeing their pain, I realized that I had to explain to them what I knew about what was going on. I sat them all down, and explained how James had been coming to me, guiding me through the experience at just the right time. If he had told us about the Caesarian earlier, we would have been upset and doubtful. Yet he told us at just the right time, so we could understand and accept what was going to happen. Somehow, we had to understand and accept his latest message: that everything really was, “OK” (an understatement, based on the waves of love that came with the message), and that his destiny was not the same as what we had hoped.

I explained how much I loved him, how I felt that I knew him intimately, like an old friend. I explained that when he was born, I became his father, and that my fatherly love for him compelled me to respect his destiny – to love him no matter what happened, to do anything for him I could do to support him, including letting him go. A profound peace settled on the room.

James died in my arms three days after he was born. We held him, sang songs to him, and loved him as much as we could while he was dying. He went peacefully without struggle or pain, and looked ever more beautiful as he was leaving our world. Even though we don’t know if he could feel or perceive anything physically, we do know that he got our love, and the love of so many during these precious three days.

I later found out that, at 7:00 pm that night, the third year Doctoral class in Santa Monica went into a silent meditation and prayer for all of our highest good to come forward. They ended at 7:20. The doctor came in at 7:22 and discovered that James’ heart had stopped. So many other miracles came forward, not the least of which were the emails, cards, and phone calls offering support. Some people who had never spoken about the loss of their own child started to share with their family as a result of hearing about James. The story of James and our love for him touched many people, including many we had never met before.

I was not changed into the father I was expecting to be: toting my son around in a backpack on hikes through the Ojai valley, changing diapers, and proudly displaying photos of first teeth in emails to overseas grandparents. I was transformed by the essence of fatherhood: that pure and selfless love that compelled me to do everything I could do to love and care for my son during those three days—and then to let him go.

James did nothing more praiseworthy than simply being born, and yet I loved (and love) him so completely that there is nothing I wouldn’t do for him. James never had anything to prove, anything to accomplish, anything even to do in this world. Yet he was perfect to me, and precious beyond words. I returned from the hospital with Val, completely stripped of my worldly ambitions. I knew that the only thing that mattered now was love.

The Russian novelist Fyodor Dostoevsky often wrote, both directly and through his fiction, about the effect of his own experience of being condemned to death, and then having his life spared moments before his execution. One swears in the moments before death never again to take a moment of living for granted. Then, once spared, one often slips back into old habits as the veil of mundane living descends again. It has been this way to some extent for me as well.

Yet this reference point of selfless love and surrender to the inevitable has stayed with me, like a lantern in my heart, like a child both born and waiting to be born again. Not a day goes by that I do not sense it. It has taken me seven years to be able to acknowledge that I do in fact feel blessed for having had those three days with James. It transformed the seven years that followed, not only through grief, but also through love.

A child was born and a father was resurrected. In the darkest days of winter, the light of a brilliant star. Thank you, my son, for teaching me about miracles.

The Circle of Light: Saying Good-Bye to Jim Peterson

by John Morgan

Friends gathered at the Petersons’ home just after Jim passed. Jim’s body was still in his bed and the room divided off by a curtain. The mortuary reps had come and gone, eventually to return, and his wife Jackie intended to stay up into the evening until they returned and picked up Jim’s body. Some friends and I would support her through that. Attendants didn’t actually make it back to Jackie’s until about 9:30 pm. By 10:00, they were returning to the mortuary as a completion to the day’s events, and Jim and Jackie’s careful planning for “after” was being put into practice.

Upon our arrival, we three Light-Cirlcers joined the family at the dinner table for a meal full of genuine caring and humor, as if Jim were right there. Doing the dishes and other cleanup afterwards was a breeze. (There’s nothing like PRANA training for times like that!) Then we all gathered around the fire in the living room and spoke or didn’t speak as the peace-that-was-present so moved us. There would be those who looked in on Jim’s repose for whatever completion was in that for them and then came back. The family loving was palpable and very nourishing. We were basking in the loving environment that Jim and Jackie had brought forward over 37 years together.

What I particularly loved about being there was witnessing how the younger ones, not just Elle, Mia, and Dani, but how all of them deeply revere Jackie. They orbited affectionately around her central presence, even while Elle, for example, tended to her own loved ones. It was a scene so much about how, with all the wackiness and imperfections of family living, the teachings of the Traveler and the Christ can be put into vibrant practice and the benefits fully reaped decades later, as the family undergoes the passing of the torch to the younger generations, and the older ones take off for the greater place called Home.

Eventually, the mortuary attendants came back, respectfully transported Jim’s body to their facility, and Jackie was free to retire for the night. We left the house with grateful and greatly full hearts and with a lingering awe for what we had just participated in. Whether formal or informal, a Circle of Light comes fully into manifestation in the Ministers present, and those who ask for that blessing are supported into a peaceful departure, as the Traveler again shows us all the ways for each of us to find that greater liberation we prepare for.

Thanks again for keeping the flame burning brightly for the Circle of Light. However we do it, I am just glad that we can do it at all. And thank you, J-R, for guiding us so lovingly into this practice, and thank you, John, for steadfastly holding the Light as we move it forward.

Blessings, John

Everyday Prayers Into the Kingdom

by Brooke Thompson

It has been over a year since my husband, Michael Thompson, died suddenly. In that time I have attended Living in Grace twice, an MSIA Conference, had pneumonia and shingles both for the first time ever, learned to pay bills and to budget. Well, I'm still struggling with the budget part. Let's just say that I've made one but we have not become good friends yet... It has been a time of tremendous sadness but also, of the most amazing growth. It has allowed me the opportunity to deeply love a wide array of friends from around the world and from across the street. I have made new friends and deepened connections to existing relationships. When Michael died, I had so much love focused at one person, I didn't realize how easy it was to love so many others in his place. His absence created the space for me to spend more time with my neighbors, my co-workers, my family, and my fellow ministers. The love and tenderness they lavished on me did so much to heal my wounded heart. I almost immediately began to expand inside in order to fill the space he left. I feel like the Grinch, my heart going from two sizes too small when Michael died, to one that has been bursting out of a box as I have learned that I have more than enough love to go around. I still miss him every day, but not every minute as I did for a long time.

One of the things that I did to help in the healing process was to put together and publish a book of Michael's prayers called "Everyday Prayers Into the Kingdom". They are a collection of the prayers he wrote almost daily for the last two years of his life. To me they are his dream and his legacy. I knew that I would end up being the one to publish this book. I would often tell him, "You have enough prayers to publish. When are you going to start working on that?" He would say, "I just want to write; I don't want to work on that part yet." When I began to put this book together, I didn't know where to begin. How did Michael want this organized? How was I going to put two years worth of daily prayers into any kind of order? I went onto his Facebook page to try to see what he had posted, thinking I would start there and immediately became lost in the messages of love and condolences sent in the first days after his death. I continued on, looking at messages he had sent to me and those I had sent back to him, particularly on the day he died and the days before. I could feel myself sinking deeper and deeper into grief and getting overwhelmed with all of it. I closed my eyes and asked God and the Travelers to come help me and started talking to Michael. "If you want this done, please come show me what to do. I really need your help." I opened my eyes, followed the little purple light and went straight to a folder on the Desktop called Books in Progress. This contained a book called Everyday Prayers Into the Kingdom. Michael had organized everything, even the Table of Contents, the Dedication, and all the prayers he wanted in each chapter. I quickly realized he had started to get it ready for publication after all! I added the last chapter, all the prayers he posted from his birthday on August 18th until the day he died on September 20th, 2011.

In the Introduction to the book he wrote, "In my experience there is one God of all creation who is a God of loving, called by many names, by many peoples, from varying disciplines from many cultures. Loving and forgiveness are the portals into a greater spiritual awareness where we all can awaken into our sameness with the same loving Father Mother God as his children. In prayer, our spirits are led to a single source, a place where we can touch into the divine. I was inspired to begin the writing of these prayers at the beginning of Lent. My purpose was to give something of myself for the Easter season by dedicating and committing to the preparation and writing of a prayer each day from the most sacred place I could connect to. My blessings from this gift have been many, most precious, a visit each day into the Kingdom. It is my prayer that others may find this a doorway where they too can enter into the Kingdom."

John Morton was also generous enough to write a review to be included on the back cover of the book. "Michael's Prayers are gifts for every soul who is traversing this world with a mission to go to God. He is a Traveler's trusted friend providing the words of comfort and guidance needed to endure to the blessed welcome home."

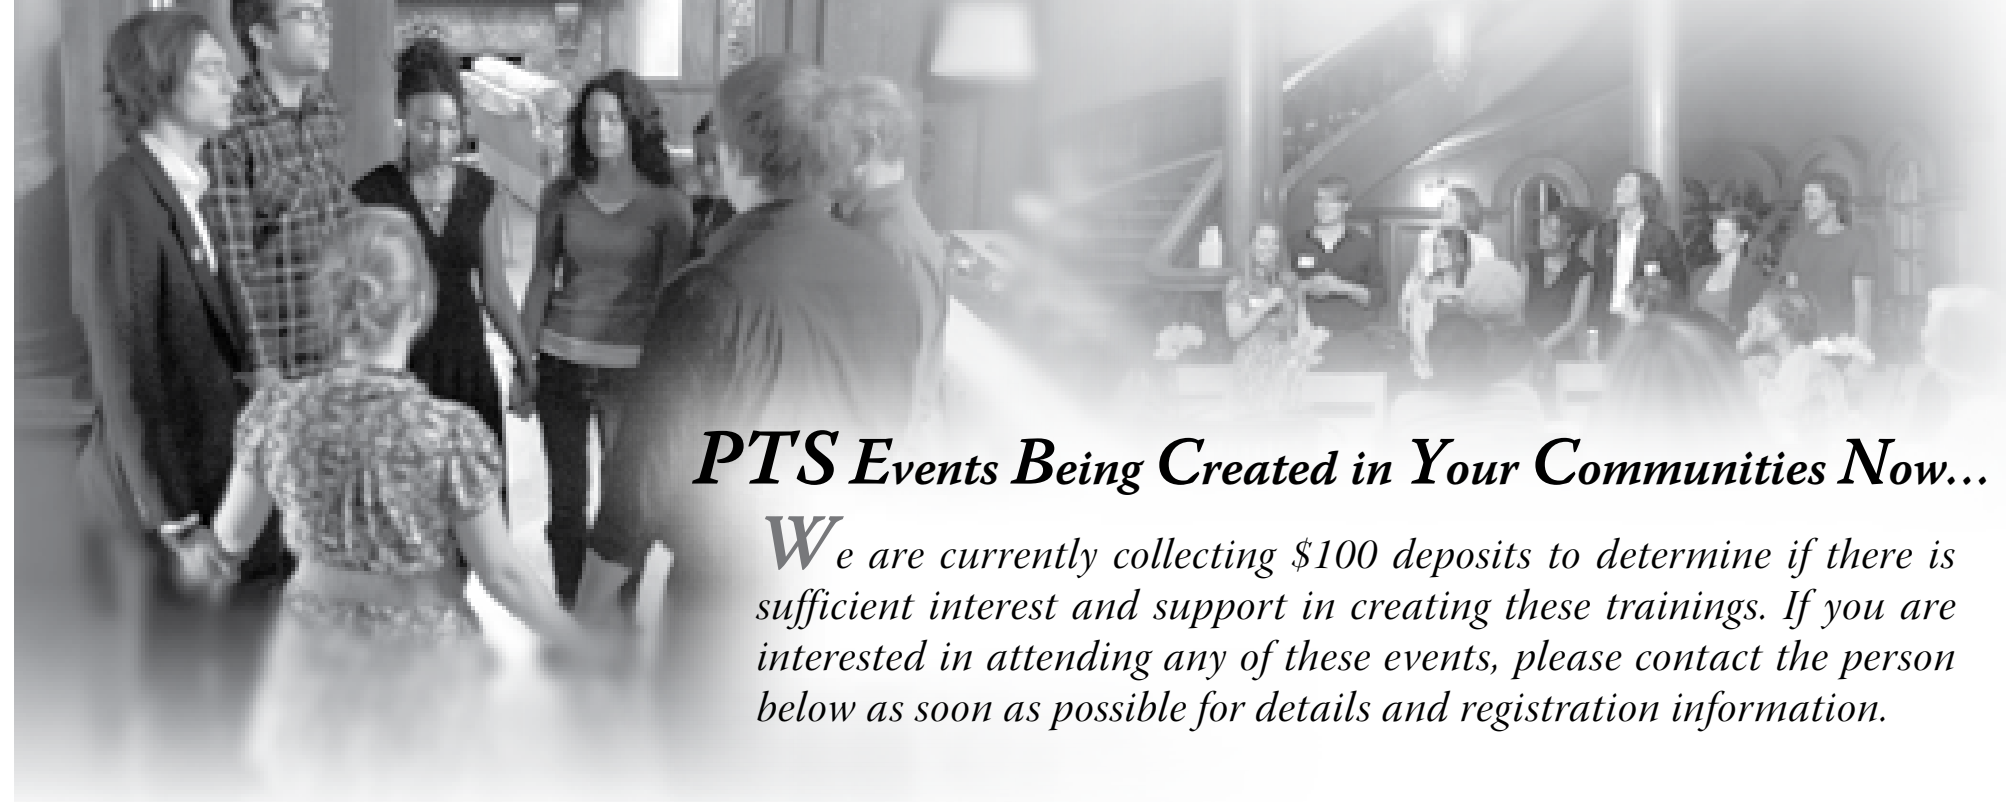

This book is now available on Amazon.com and Amazon Europe. Feel free to buy many copies for friends and loved ones and write a glowing review on Amazon while you are there!! A portion of all proceeds from the book will be donated to MSIA and to John Morton Ministries.

The following prayer was written when my father died in 2008. It brought me comfort then and continues to do so. God Bless You All Angels.

Prayer of Release

Lord, we are alive in you as we embrace the transient life on this earth and its passing. We are made awake in the great wave of loving, as one we love is called to you. We honor the heartache, the physical loss, as we celebrate what is gained. Every memory is enhanced as if bathed in golden light. Hold us, Lord, in the tenderness of all that has been prepared for the reception of our loved one as he comes to you. Bless every mourner with the truth of what is to come and bring them through the grieving and into an expanding and accepting peace. Lord, strengthen our hearts' connection and magnify our joy as we are all surrounded and protected in your eternal love.

IF YOU BUILD IT, THEY WILL COME!

MSIA

The MOVEMENT of SPIRITUAL INNER AWARENESS (MSIA) teaches Soul Transcendence, which is becoming aware of oneself as a Soul, and, more than that, as one with God. Soul Awareness Discourses are the heart of MSIA's teachings. They offer many practical keys to more successful living. Even more important, they offer keys to greater spiritual awareness and knowledge of the Soul. MSIA's approach is to present activities and techniques that direct us toward the Spirit and loving that are the essence of who we are, and to provide support for practicing those things if people choose to use them.

In MSIA we respect any approach that encourages people on their path home to God. We certainly don't claim to have the only way, but we do have a way that is assisting thousands of people to do this while experiencing greater health, happiness, abundance, and joy. The foundation of MSIA is loving, and it is in that spirit that we invite you to participate with us in whatever way works for you.

USM

USM was founded in 1976 by John-Roger and is a private graduate school offering Master's degrees in Spiritual Psychology and Spiritual Psychology with an Emphasis in Consciousness, Health, and Healing. Known as the Worldwide Center for the Study and Practice of Spiritual Psychology, USM's mission is communicating the principles and practices of Spiritual Psychology worldwide through the process of Soul-Centered education.

USM

Soul-Centered education recognizes spiritual reality and begins with the assertion that rather than human beings who have a soul, we are more accurately described as souls having a human experience. This assertion evokes a radical paradigm shift, which results in a psychological and educational process whose goal is to bring forth the beauty, wisdom, and compassion inherent in every human being.

This experiential educational paradigm evokes in students their own answers to the three essential questions: Who am I? Why am I here and what is my purpose? How can I make a meaningful contribution in the world?

HEARTFELT

THE HEARTFELT FOUNDATION, founded in 1979 by John-Roger, is a volunteer-driven service organization which is operated through the Church of the Movement of Spiritual Inner Awareness (MSIA), a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization. 100% of donations received go to those we serve. Heartfelt's mission statement is: "Changing people's lives through the healing power of heartfelt service."

People and the heart are a primary focus of our work, and volunteers are the key to our success.

The Foundation's service includes assisting at-risk and in-need families, providing support and services to disadvantaged or abused children, helping the homeless and comforting the sick. Thousands of people in need have been served by our loving volunteers.

An important part of Heartfelt's work is the HeartReach Program, which reaches out with food, medicine loving and caring hearts and Light support to members of our spiritual family who are undergoing life-challenging or medical crises. As a result of the short-term support that HeartReach is able to provide, people are cared for through difficult situations.

INITIATION

If you are just starting the Soul Awareness Discourses, Discourse #1 explains initiation into the Sound Current. You may choose to study the Discourses with the intention to be initiated on this path, or to simply read them as information. If you do choose to study toward initiation, the Traveler works with you more closely, and you may notice a greater spiritual awareness in your own consciousness as this work goes on.

If you are studying toward initiation, you need to write and mail a letter to the Traveler that this is your intention. If you have written and mailed your intention to the Traveler, you can apply for initiation when you have completed Discourse 24.

THE MSIA MINISTRY

The MSIA ministry is for initiates of the Traveler who are called inwardly to serve the spirit of their hearts.

Service may be in any form, from volunteering for the Church to assisting people in need or organizations that serve those people, and anything in between. The only requirement is that the ministry is active and done regularly.

MSIA ministers may perform services, like marriages, that clergy of other denominations are authorized to do as long as they comply with the laws of the locality in which they serve.

People who have received initiation into the Sound Current through the Traveler may request an Application for Ordination packet from:
Ministerial Services In Action • 3500 W. Adams Blvd. • Los Angeles, CA 90018

WRITING TO J-R & JOHN

Sometimes people reading Discourses, especially those studying toward initiation, want to write to John Morton or John-Roger. Writing often helps you let go of a troubling situation and open more to the Traveler's assistance inwardly.

As soon as you write to John Morton or John-Roger, they get the message on the spiritual levels, and they do what Spirit allows. Then, to let go of the situation in your consciousness, you burn or mail your letter. Whether you burn or mail what you wrote, you may find that you get your answers on the inner levels, sometimes very quickly. You may also experience greater calm, clarity, or peace, which can help you go through whatever challenges you face.

We suggest that you place the situation in the Light, ask for clarification during s.e.'s, dreams, etc., and then look for the answers within you. Often reading a Discourse or listening to an MSIA tape (either at home or at a seminar) will provide keys to assist you in handling your situation. You can also refer to any of the numerous books by J-R and John to find information that relates to what you are dealing with. These two have shared so much with us over the years, and we encourage you to send your letters via e-mail, using these addresses:

For John-Roger: letterj-r@msia.org
For John Morton: letterjohnmorton@msia.org

If you live in the United States and if you send your letter to J-R or John in hard copy via the mail, you need to include a self-addressed stamped envelope (SASE) if you want a reply from either of them.

Many hundreds of people write personal letters each month to J-R and John, so please note that even if you do send a letter by e-mail or if you do send in an SASE with your letter, you may not receive a response back. This does not imply that your concern is not important or that you are being ignored. There simply may be no need for a physical reply, or there may be no answer available to you at the time you write.

In addition to the e-mail addresses above, mail to John Morton or John-Roger can be sent to:

MSIA • P.O. Box 513935 • Los Angeles, CA 90051-1935

Master of Spiritual Science

The Master's Program

Year One: Creating Through Grace

During year one, Creating Through Grace, students gain greater awareness of how they live their lives—physically, emotionally, and mentally—and of how they can bring these levels into greater alignment and cooperation with their spiritual intention. In doing this, students can increase their singleness of purpose so that, regardless of outer circumstances, they can experience God as their partner, and grace can be extended to them in greater ways.

Year Two: Fulfilling the Spiritual Promise

During year two, Fulfilling the Spiritual Promise, students focus on aligning more with the Christ and awakening more to the promise that they were “born the Lord.” Processes are designed to give students greater freedom in letting go of the past and rediscovering the innocence of living in the present. As the course develops, students move more fully into the Beloved, “where the Soul replaces the personality as the center of consciousness and energy.” The spiritual promise is then experienced as an ongoing, living reality that one chooses into each day.

Year Three: Living From The Inside Out (Optional)

By referencing all of the Master's Program, the student can put into practice those things that are the most impactful for them in the moment to initiate significant, profound, and effective growth. The student has the opportunity to take the teachings to deeper levels of awareness, where simple changes can become invaluable lessons for living an ordinary life. Taking this class is truly a way to become aware on a daily basis how you are living the teachings from the inside out. The possibilities for growth, expansion, and revelation are unlimited.

Prerequisites:

Active subscription to MSIA Soul Awareness Discourses for at least one year prior to beginning of program (12 complete) and Active subscription to Soul Awareness Teachings (SATs).

“The thing we’re on the planet to learn is discipline toward God’s direction. That discipline is not a punishment. It’s joy. And it’s a real thankful thing to have.”

- M.A. in Spiritual Psychology with an Emphasis in Consciousness, Health, and Healing
- New! Soul-Centered Professional Coaching Six-Month Certificate Program

More people on the planet are being called to answer the questions: "Who am I?" "Why am I here?" and "How can I make a more meaningful contribution in my world?" USM teaches the Principles and Practices of Spiritual Psychology assisting you in discovering your own answers and taking action steps to step more fully into a life that has heartfelt meaning for you.

We would love for you to be with us on Wednesday evening, March 20, because your presence always makes the evening more special. And we invite you to bring someone you sense may be asking the questions above—they may be called inwardly into the class of 2013-2014! If you cannot attend in person, the Information Evening will be streamed LIVE Worldwide! Via Web stream: <http://www.ustream.tv/channel/usm-events>

RSVP online or call USM at (310) 829-7402 or visit www.UniversityofSantaMonica.edu

AVAILABLE NOW—GPS for the Soul and Rhapsody of Roses A Soul-Centered Mobile App Supporting Inner Peace & Balance

USM is excited to partner with The Huffington Post in a first-of-its-kind, FREE Soul-Centered mobile app called GPS for the Soul. The University is thrilled to be one of 20 launch partners contributing to this digital advancement, including Wayne Dyer, Deepak Chopra, among others. This is yet another uplifting step in fulfilling the University's mission and expanding the heart of Spiritual Psychology around the globe.

Like a GPS system for a car, this mobile app helps users to "recalculate" and guide them back to a desired location of inner peace and balance. Users have the freedom to access GPS tools that help to facilitate the inner calm they desire anytime, anywhere.

USM's first guide, Rhapsody of Roses, features photos from Mary's garden paired with Ron and Mary's favorite Loyalty to Your Soul quotes and accompanied by a special composition from USM grad and Grammy Award-Winning composer Jon Gilutin called "The Love in Mary's Roses."

Visit The Huffington Post, the Apple store, or <http://bit.ly/YN6zHu> to download the GPS for the Soul app and enjoy USM's Rhapsody of Roses.

"Detach yourself from this earth, from memories of the past, from experiences of the future. Do those things that bring you health, wealth and happiness in a detached state and let all the rest go."
—John-Roger, DSS
